

The Parents Perspective

As we contemplate Matt's graduation from St Peter's this year, we can't help but look back and reminisce about what St Peter's has meant to our family. After 15 continuous years and two kids through the system, it's hard to imagine life sans St Peter's Lutheran Church School. But alas tis true, Looking back I can vividly recall the first year construction of the administration wing, early childhood center and elementary rooms; interviewing and hiring an administrator and teachers before any of the buildings were anywhere near complete, and the unfounded anxiety of setting a school budget without any idea if the children would come. They did.

So it was through prayerful consideration that we also committed. It truly was an easy decision and a decision that has blessed our family beyond measure. Both of our sons have flourished in this place. Matt's most memorable element as he prepares for graduation is the teachers. Each and every one of them has touched his life in some way. Their dedication to teaching and love for the Lord make this place, and what is taught here, very special. I know that the Christian foundation, personal character, knowledge and discipline he learned during his short eight years here will stay with him and guide him for a lifetime. It is nearly impossible to clearly convey what goes thorough our minds as we look back and contemplate our family time here and Matt's pending graduation. But we are confident looking forward that his time here has prepared him for a wonderful Christ-filled life, full of the blessings that God will continue to bestow on him. And he will know, beyond a shadow of a doubt, who provided it all.

St Peters School has truly blessed our children and indeed our entire family. While we recognize that the era of our children's time in the classroom has ended, I know that this school will continue to be part of our lives for many years to come. God has blessed this school indeed, and all who believe.
